(Copyright 2022 Salary.com) Employers: Job Description Management Tool "The biggest challenge for managers is employing staff and trying to attract staff to a position. You're always battling it because you just can't pay the high wages. A lot of people in hospitality do it for the passion instead. Making sure you have a good team in place and have a good team culture is important. The culture of the staff reflects on the cafe."What qualities do you need?"You need to have positivity. Some training would be advantageous - and customer relations skills if you want to be out the front. The hospitality industry is high stress, high risk, you're working in 40 degrees, and people 'want it now'. I think people really underestimate how hard hospitality is. Everyone is in such a hurry these days."What are the rewards?"If it's your passion, it's what you do. You do it for the fun and enjoyment and smiles. For the buzz that you get from people saying, 'That's fantastic', and knowing they want to come back to your restaurant." Cafe/restaurant manager video Andrew Waddington talks about what it's like to be a cafe manager - 1.21 mins. Andrew: Would you like cream or yoghurt? Customer: No, as it comes. Andrew: Good as gold, that's great. Customer: Thanks a lot. Andrew: Hi, I'm Andrew Waddington, I'm the cafe manager here at Morrison Street Cafe. A few basic things that I do during the day would be to make sure that the staff interests are held quite highly. Rosters, making sure that everyone is on time. Customer satisfaction always comes first and looking at a few things to sort of change round the cafe to keep the systems in place. A few other things to think about is how to problem solve on your feet and make sure you can do things in a cool, calm and collected manner. A few things that really make my day are when I can see the satisfaction on customers' faces when they walk in and they go, 'Wow, what a wonderful crew of people you've got working here, everyone's happy and smiling', and they walk away feeling better than when they walked in.
